New data breach laws for Australia - IFIP News

IFIP has welcomed the introduction of new data breach laws in Australia, which will require organisations to notify individuals of any data breaches that could cause harm.

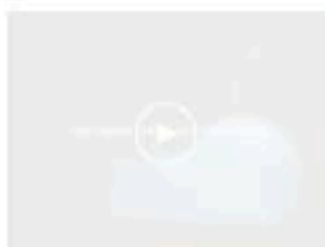

The new laws, which are part of the Privacy Amendment (Data Breach Response) Bill 2011, will require organisations to notify individuals of any data breaches that could cause harm. The laws will also require organisations to take steps to prevent or minimise the harm caused by a data breach.
